

Earning more than just a skill in your Career and Technical Education (CTE) course

Students in state approved CTE programs such as Culinary, Automotive, Business Management, Marketing, Radio & Broadcasting, Finance and many others have an opportunity to earn articulated college credit. Articulation is a process where students can earn college credit for demonstrating skills and competencies through their high school class.

Students must meet certain guidelines for completion of the class according to each college articulation agreement. Most of these expectations revolve around achieving an 80% or better and a teacher recommendation but they are specific to the college partnering with the high school program.

How does this help a student? The student can then take their articulated credit with them to that college and continue the pursuit of their related career choice. This allows the student to advance their degree process through articulation while saving on tuition and fees.

At your local district, check with your CTE Coordinator to see what articulation options are available to you.

For a list of state wide articulation agreements and more information, you can visit the Michigan Department of Education or by following this link: <http://www.michigan.gov/mde/> and choosing "MDE Office", and then selecting Career and Technical Education. You will see a resource on the left titled "Statewide Articulation".
